

an saying: "It's just like reading one's obituary, isn't it? It is for all the world like Mark Twain's experience when he received a telegram asking if he was dead and replied that the rumor was grossly exaggerated."

"I have been Commissioner of Police since 1918. In that time my resignation has been announced just ninety times and my summary removal from office at least sixty times. I'll tell you this bit of authentic news: I may resign from office some wet Tuesday after a full moon."

He was asked if he knew of the identity of the "friend" who had told of the resignation.

"To the best of my knowledge and belief," the Commissioner said, "it is somebody who has been overlooked by Dr. Carleton Simon—Dr. Simon being the special deputy commissioner who deals with dope fiends."

Enright Much "Surprised."

Mr. Enright said he first heard the report of his resignation when "117 reports, more or less," met him at the portal yesterday morning. "It took me completely by surprise—completely," he said.

During all this talk Mr. Enright was pictured as being in fine humor and in a pleasant state of amusement.

It will be noted that nothing that he said was there categorical contradiction of the resignation story. Another member of the Hyman administration who ought to know the facts entered no denial but referred inquiries to the denial of the Mayor. Mr. Whitman said he knew nothing about the matter one way or the other.

Toward the end of the interview already quoted the reporter asked the Commissioner if his letter of Friday to District Attorney Swann, embodying the Mayor's letter of refusal to assign detectives to help in the Whitman investigation, was intended as a direct affront to Mr. Whitman, who had caused Mr. Swann to make special application for the services of his old-time aide, Detective Al Thomas. In his reply to this question Mr. Enright said:

"Mr. Whitman is not known in the transaction. I understand it, Mr. Whitman, a subordinate in the office of District Attorney Swann. Mr. Swann wrote and asked me for the detail of a certain police officer to his office. He had already received a letter from the Mayor regarding the detailing of men from the Police Department to the District Attorney's office, but had failed to give it to the press in accordance with his usual custom in handling official correspondence."

"When answering Judge Swann's letter I merely called the District Attorney's attention to the Mayor's letter; that speaks for itself."

Sequel to Refusal of Aid.

The subpoenaing of the Mayor and Police Commissioner yesterday for appearance before the Grand Jury at 10:30 o'clock to-morrow morning was a sequel to the Enright-Swann letter and the denials of the Commissioner. Mr. Whitman as special counsel, he put himself in the position of having to stand sponsor for an investigation that is apparently going deeper than he thought it would when it started and that has already turned Mayor Hyman against him. As Mr. Commissioner Enright, he has been called toward Mr. Swann ever since the transfer of the case to Costigan, to which Mr. Swann objected.

It is expected that the Grand Jury, with Mr. Whitman as its interrogator, will wish to ask the Mayor and the Police Commissioner exactly why they would not give police assistance, and to see whether or not their refusal amounted to collusion in violation of their duty as officers of the law. It is indicated, however, that these witnesses will not be asked to waive immunity. Several other witnesses, whose names were kept secret, have been called for to-morrow.

Emil Kling, the process server who handled the subpoenas yesterday, carried the one with Enright's name to Lieut. Ruckley, the Commissioner's outside office man, who accepted it for his chief. The next subpoena, of the three subpoenas, called for Roger Walsh, chief clerk of the Police Department and certain records, including those of the automobile squad. Walsh referred Kling to Chief Inspector Lahey, for whom the paper was accepted by Detective Sergeant McDonald.

Serving Subpoena on Mayor.

Then the indefatigable Kling hied him to City Hall. His first mission was equivalent to that of a Soviet ambassador in a Junker court. A policeman acquainted the Mayor's secretary, John P. Sinnott, of Kling's errand. Sinnott sent out word that Kling should wait a few minutes. Kling waited. An envoy came forth to ask him just when the Mayor and Police Commissioner were to go before the Grand Jury. Kling waited. He waited some more—longer period this time. A guess that the Mayor did some telephoning is purely speculative. Eventually Sinnott went to Kling and said, "Where's the subpoena?" Kling gave him the subpoena and that's how Mayor Hyman got his card of admission to the Grand Jury room.

Mr. Whitman has nothing to say about all this subpoenaing. He would not discuss his programme for to-morrow. To a question whether he had asked for the removal of Commissioner Enright's name, he said "yes."

Asked if he expected to make such a request he smiled. But he did have something to say about Capt. Dan Costigan, who was reduced and transferred. Mr. Enright said on Friday night, for "inefficiency and delinquency."

"I was a Magistrate, Judge of General Sessions and District Attorney for a period covering many years in New York," Mr. Whitman declared. "During this time I was brought into close contact with Dan Costigan of the Police Department and had every opportunity of observing his work. He is an eminently honest man, in my opinion one of the best police officers New York has ever had."

Letters saying that the police had done good work in trying to find the man who stole $100,000 in cash and securities from Messinger McKim of the Chemical National Bank last month were made public yesterday by the Mayor. They were sent to the Mayor, Mr. Whitman and Police Commissioner by Charles L. Phillips, chief superintendent for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company. He said that the criticism of the police made to Mr. Whitman by Mr. Schneider, a private detective, was entirely unjustified. On the contrary, Mr. Phillips said, he had never known of more energetic and intelligent investigation, especially on the part of Detective John B. Leahy and John McMan, and he was confident they would catch the thieves. He added that the actions of Schneider had hampered the work of the Police Department.

On January 7 District Attorney Swann wrote to the Grand Jury that the Mayor had promised to place any six detectives

Hints Graft in Rewards for Stolen Motor Cars

ALL records of the Police Department covering the stealing and recovery of automobiles in the year 1920 are subpoenaed yesterday by the Grand Jury at the request of Charles S. Whitman.

The report, to be in Mr. Whitman's hands at 9 A. M. to-morrow, must list each theft, with the date, and also the date and circumstances of recovery, if recovery was made. Detectives in every precinct of the city were busy last night compiling the list.

In most cases a substantial reward is offered for the return of a stolen car. One of the things that Mr. Whitman intends to find out is to what persons the money went. He has been informed that a detective agency managed by a former member of the department has been especially active in the recovery of cars, the loss of which was reported to the police.

at its disposal and help in any other way. On January 8, it developed, however, that there was a categorical contradiction of the resignation story. Another member of the Hyman administration who ought to know the facts entered no denial but referred inquiries to the denial of the Mayor. Mr. Whitman said he knew nothing about the matter one way or the other.

FOUR CAPTAINS QUIT POLICE ON PENSIONS

McAuley, Manhattan; Mead, Bronx; Burns, Brooklyn, and McNally, L. I. City Retire.

Four police captains were retired yesterday on pensions, effective at 12:01 o'clock this morning. They are James McAuley of the West Forty-seventh street station; Edward F. McNally, Fourth street, Long Island City; Edward J. Burns, Prospect Park, Brooklyn, and Charles C. Mead, Simpson street, The Bronx.

A bill in the Legislature which, if passed, would equalize the pensions of all the police force, so that a captain would get no more than a patrolman, may have had something to do with this. By retiring now the captains will receive half as much as their captain's salary has been. It is rumored also that the possibility of the Board of Estimate's shaving off the advances in police pay granted on August 20 last might have been a factor. Salary reduction means pension reduction.

Two of the Captains, Burns and Mead, have not quite completed their twenty-five years in the department. It is supposed they are retired on certificates of disability. McNally joined the force on November 15, 1885; Burns on January 29, 1890; McAuley on January 8, 1894, and Mead on February 25, 1897.

Capt. McAuley has ruled the West Forty-seventh street precinct, which includes most of the theatre district, since April 1918, when Inspector Dominick Henry was indicted. In his twenty-five years of service only one complaint was made against him and that was trivial and was dismissed, so he leaves with a spotless record.

McAuley has been known as a cold shoulder of politicians. He told them to keep away from him and gave them short shrift when they tried to get familiar. One who has a good deal of prestige attempted to "introduce a friend" one evening and received a "bawling out" that he hasn't forgotten yet.

Commissioner Enright made McAuley a captain on April 30, 1919, and assigned him to East Fifth street and later to the 104th Precinct, in Brooklyn.

He and Mayor Hyman are longtime friends. He said last night that he was retiring merely because he felt he had "done his bit" and felt that he ought to give up night work.

Mead was when they tried to get familiar. One who has a good deal of prestige attempted to "introduce a friend" one evening and received a "bawling out" that he hasn't forgotten yet.

LOCKWOOD'S MEN SAY YES AM TO HALT BANK INQUIRY

Committee Members Sure They Will Receive Increased Power.

TO FORCE OPEN BATTLE

See Defeat of Legislators' Plans to Kill Measure Secretly.

PANIC CRY BEING RAISED

Statewide Campaign of Misrepresentation Tries to Scare People.

Members of the Lockwood legislative committee who returned to this city for the week end declared yesterday that a campaign of misrepresentation has been waged throughout the State for the purpose of defeating their application for increased powers with which to inquire into the relation of big financial institutions to the housing situation.

They expressed the belief also that the legislators who are opposed to granting them the increased power will be unable to kill or cripple the Lockwood measure in secret session and that a battle in the open is inevitable.

According to these members of the committee every effort has been made by opponents of the proposed financial end of the investigation to create the impression that it would precipitate a panic, and lurid stories have been circulated in Albany concerning the dire possibilities of disaster.

Copies of a questionnaire which the Lockwood committee sent to the various banks last fall and which was later withdrawn by the committee have been circulated among men of influence in legislative affairs for the purpose of creating a misimpression as to the aims of the committee.

The members said yesterday that this questionnaire was in fact drawn hurriedly and that after sending it out they learned that it was full of errors and that it would put the banks to great inconvenience to answer the questions, so it was recalled and another questionnaire by Samuel Untermyer was sent out.

The questionnaire drafted by Mr. Untermyer lays the foundation for the proposed inquiry into real estate investments of these institutions, and more than half of the banking institutions of the State have filled out these questionnaires and returned them to the committee. Nevertheless, the opponents of the Lockwood resolution make no mention of this, and according to the members of the committee, the first questionnaire is being passed for the purpose of creating the impression that the committee is seeking to impose an unbearable burden upon the banks.

Two other matters on which enemies of the Lockwood resolution are harping are that this is "a bad time to unsettle credit" and that the committee is aiming at a spotless record.

The latter charge is accepted only by those who are ignorant of the wording of the resolution, which contains no matter about the city administration, while to the former the committee members reply that there is no time so good as the present for the investigation. They say that when times are good financial inquiries are opposed upon the ground that "well enough" should be let alone, and that when they are not good the opposition is invariably based upon the theory that the investigators should wait until they improve.

REALTY BOARDS FAVOR POWER FOR LOCKWOOD

Also Want Rent Laws Revised to Protect Owners.

Special Despatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD, New York, Jan. 15.

The New York State Association of Real Estate Boards adopted resolutions here to-day to give to the Lockwood committee adequate power and time to continue and complete its investigation of all corporations, organizations, combinations and individuals "that in any way delay or affect the cost of building operations, also to make investigation of such factors as may tend to assist new construction." The resolution states that the association favors legislation that will prevent combinations of capital, labor or individuals from artificially controlling the production of building material or increasing the cost of construction.

A statement issued by the association declares that in the housing crisis in this State "many of the savings banks and, more particularly, many of the fire and life insurance companies have not done their full duty in providing needed funds for building purposes."

A statement issued by the association said that when the Legislature authorized savings banks to invest in real estate mortgages up to 65 per cent. of their assets they believed that investment up to that amount left a proper margin of safety. The association believes that the pressure of public opinion should be brought to bear on all savings banks and insurance companies which do not invest the proper quota of their assets in such mortgages, "as they would have been justified in doing in order to help relieve the housing shortage."

The association intends to take up the question with savings banks and insurance companies to obtain statistics of mortgages invested and of their attitude toward the solution of the housing problem.

The association asks for an exemption from the State and national income tax laws of the income from at least $40,000 of mortgages in individual ownership. The association condemned as "unscientific, uneconomic and un-American" the housing and rent laws, which have demonstrated their failure to solve the housing problem. Pending their repeal it asks that they be immediately amended in such a manner as to encourage builders and investors "by restoring the validity of contracts and the protection of the rights of ownership of real property."

Fly Wheel Proves Name in Trip Over Houses

ROCHESTER, Jan. 15.—A large fly wheel on a bailing outfit used by the Pavilion Natural Gas Company in that place yesterday broke loose from the machine and flew over three houses and crashed through Miss Helen Ellwell's dining room window. The wheel in its flight of thirty feet shattered the window to splinters, destroyed many flowering plants therein and smashed part of the furniture of one room. Miss Ellwell was in the kitchen and suffered no injury.

at Twenty-eighth street and Fifth avenue.

Police records show that Gunther and Schimmler were held up at about the same place a year ago, but on that occasion the robbers were frightened away by their cries for help.

It was learned last night that Benjamin Newfield, proprietor of the Ocean Hill Laundry, 219 Fulton street, Brooklyn, was held up Friday in his store and robbed of $1,225 in cash and jewelry.

Newfield was alone in the store, according to the story he told the police, when two men entered and covered him with revolvers. One took his keys and locked the door, after which he passed a key to the other man, who took Newfield into the rear room and robbed him of $200 in cash, his watch, ring and scarf pin and took $400 from the cash drawer. Newfield was tied and gagged and could not free himself until half an hour after the robbers had fled.

COPS' SHOTS CAPTURE TWO MEN ON A ROOF

Loot Found When Culprits Surrender in W. 68th St.

Detectives from the West Sixty-eighth street police station fired several shots and aroused hundreds of persons last night in capturing two alleged burglars on the roofs of the houses at 124, 126 and 118 West Seventy-third street. The prisoners were locked up, charged with burglary. They said they were Louis O'Neil, 21 years old, of 509 West 104th street, and William Daley, 23 years old, of 2074 Eighth avenue.

Just before 11 o'clock a woman living at 124 West Seventy-third street called the police station and said she had heard footsteps on the roof. Detectives Finn, Lawless and Maloney were sent to investigate. They surrounded the block with policemen and went to the roof of 118 West Seventy-third street. There they found a rope, applied with a piece of clothesline, dangling from the chimney down to the roof of the adjoining house, which is about twenty-five feet lower.

From the roof the detectives could get a clear view of the rear of the Hotel Nobleton, at 125 West Seventy-third street. They saw two men come out of a window and make their way across the roofs until they came to the roof of 118 West Seventy-third street. They saw a pack, the detectives called on them to halt, but instead they ran. After several shots were fired the men surrendered.

When Frederick Cowan and his wife returned to their room in the hotel they found that they had been robbed of silverware and clothing valued at $400. They identified the contents of Daley's pack as their property.

BOMB SUSPECTED, BOTTLE IS FOUND

Policeman Discovers Mysterious Leather Bag and Looks for Explosive.

IMMERSED IN WATER

Electric Torch Reveals Only Quart of Ancient Liquor as Contents.

Policeman Philip Gimpy of the Forty-seventh street station stood at the uptown end of the Times Building, at Forty-third street and Seventh avenue, at 4:05 o'clock yesterday afternoon, surveying the landscape and noting that everything was where he left it when he went off duty Friday at midnight. He turned to look south, having been warned to watch for attempts to destroy churches, office buildings, private homes and other places. His attention was drawn to a black leather bag that leaned against the Times Building wall on the north end.

But Gimpy gave the bag no particular attention. There were scores of persons about and he assumed the bag was the property of one of them.

At 4:30 the bag was still in the same place. Gimpy assured himself it hadn't moved an inch and then called over a newsboy to find out if he had seen any one place it against the wall. He got no information.

So when 5 o'clock came along and the bag was still where he first saw it Gimpy went over to investigate. He pried the edges of the thing apart and was able to see a round, shiny object which had all the hallmarks of a bomb. Without asking him anything further, Gimpy picked up the bag and rushed away up Broadway, heading in the general direction of the station house.

"Look out!" he called to passerby, holding the bag at arm's length. "Look out of my way! I'm in a hurry!" All Broadway got out of his way. He was making close to fifty feet per second as he rounded the corner of Fifty-seventh street and headed west. At the door of the station house he paused only long enough to call for Capt. McAuley. "Cap," he hollered, "I'm taking this into the back yard. It looks like a bomb."

Out in the yard a pail of water was provided and the whole bag was immersed in it. Gimpy and the captain and several policemen stood around to see that the water kept the leather covered, and at the end of half an hour it was believed safe for Detective Denison and Fitzgerald to attempt the final step.

The two men, holding the bag well under water, forced the lock and pulled the bag open. It was pretty dark by that time, and when they reached into the depths of the bag and felt a hard, smooth cylinder they called over their shoulders in chorus, as follows:

"A light, quick!"

An electric torch was used to illuminate the interior of the bag and under its rays there was revealed not an engine of destruction such as a man with a red handkerchief around his neck might be expected to leave lying around—not an infernal machine with a clock and every thing attached, such as Gimpy thought he had captured. No, sir, not by a jugful. The bag contained merely a quart bottle of ancient, not to say excellent, liquor. Owner may have same by applying, proving, &c.

MURDER OF NURSE MYSTERY TO NAVY

Victim of Night Assault at Annapolis Academy Dies Without Speaking.

ONLY SUSPECT HAS ALIBI

Death Caused by Blows of Iron Pipe, Later Found on Scene of Tragedy.

Special Despatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD, ANNAPOLIS, Jan. 15.

No clue has been obtained to the murder of Miss Harriet M. Kavanaugh, navy nurse, who met her death last night, though a board of officers and civilian specialists are doing everything in their power to reach the truth as to the crime and apprehend its perpetrator.

Miss Kavanaugh, who was 35 years old, was from Buffalo, and had been in the navy service for many years. She had been stationed here on two different occasions, beginning the last tour of duty in July of 1920.

This afternoon a negro mess attendant stationed on the ship Cumberland, attached to the Naval Academy, was under a certain amount of suspicion through circumstances brought out by the board of investigation. Counsel was designated for him and in a short time he was able to prove a complete alibi. He has been released from detention.

Several circumstances connected with the murder of Miss Kavanaugh developed during the day. It is known that the nurse left her companion, Miss Oblander, another nurse at the Naval Hospital, near the northern gate of the Naval Academy at exactly a quarter past nine last night. A son of James Casey, foreman of laborers at the academy, who lives within seventy-five yards of the scene of the murder, remembers meeting a woman on the bridge crossing to the academy at a time which he believes to be a few minutes after.

At a quarter to 10 Kenneth W. Riley, pharmacist's mate, who was between the northern end of the College Creek bridge and the naval cemetery, heard groans, which apparently came from the bottom of a steep bank which bounds the road on the east side of the cemetery. He investigated and found Miss Kavanaugh. He carried her to the hospital and everything possible was done for her. She died at 11 o'clock this morning without having regained consciousness.

It was found that Miss Kavanaugh had been hit three blows on the head, and a piece of iron pipe about two feet long, which was found near the spot, undoubtedly was the weapon used. The spot at which the crime was committed is in the Government reservation and separated from the Naval Academy grounds proper only by College Creek, a body of tide water about 150 yards broad. It is believed the nurse was attacked while on the road leading from the end of the bridge opposite the Academy to the naval hospital, to which she was attached, and near the naval cemetery, and that she was thrown down the embankment toward the road and sea wall.

PERSONAL—But Not Confidential

Anybody who stops to think even a little bit knows that Wilful Waste is the principal cause for the present conditions in this country.

The only remedy for the present and for the future is Thoughtful Thrift.

The reason for a NATIONAL THRIFT WEEK is the general conviction that all of the people must be taught the wisdom, of living within their incomes and always keeping a surplus on hand.

Henry L. Doherty & Company, 60 Wall street, for whom I am writing these Thrift Letters, know that the country's safety and prosperity depend on the practice of Thrift by all of the people.

Practically every executive in the Doherty organization, and most of its 20,000 workers employed in all sections of the country, are strong believers in the sane Practice of Thrift.

The success of the organization is largely due to Thoughtful Thrift.

It is a splendid idea to start NATIONAL THRIFT WEEK on the anniversary of Benjamin Franklin's birthday, which is to-morrow, Jan. 17.

You and I certainly realize that it is a wonderful thing for a man to so live his life that he builds something of value to future generations, as Benjamin Franklin did. He lived in a period when opportunities were far fewer than they are to-day—but, nevertheless, he found many ways to be of Great Service to his country and to himself.

One very Big Idea that Benjamin Franklin implanted in the minds of a great many people in his lifetime was that those who practised Thrift would be better equipped to do their full duty as citizens.

This country to-day has fewer Thrifty citizens in proportion to population than it had from 1706 to 1790—the period of Benjamin Franklin's life—yet there is as much, if not a greater, need to-day to Practice Thrift than then.

Write to or call on Henry L. Doherty & Company, 60 Wall Street, who will be glad to advise you.

Letter No. 15 will appear in to-morrow's newspapers.

Sincerely yours, WILLIAM C. FREEMAN, 117 West 46th St., N. Y. City.

POSED AS A NOBLEMAN; PASSED BAD CHECKS

Clamecy Even Fooled Judge Once, Declare Police.

Philippe de Clamecy, 45 years old, pleaded guilty yesterday in the Tombs court to passing a worthless check for $300 last October. He was committed without bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. When De Clamecy was arraigned Peter L. F. Sabatino, Assistant District Attorney, told Magistrate Koenig that De Clamecy had an international record. He read a long record extending over a period of eighteen years, alleging convictions in London, Boston and the city, and of arrests in other cities.

An dispatch received from Boston last night it was said that De Clamecy posed in that city as a foreign nobleman some years ago, and answering to the title of Duke was lionized in exclusive circles for weeks before he was taken into custody at the instance of hotel proprietors who said his checks were worthless. On another occasion, as a society pet, the despatch said, he sauntered into a courtroom, was introduced to the Judge as a distinguished student of court procedure and accepted the Judge's invitation to sit with him on the bench.

De Clamecy, a Frenchman, secretary of the United Computing Machine Company of 30 Vesey street, was the complainant against De Clamecy.
